Short and Egocentric

Aviation in New Zealand

- 1) 787-9: 18 hours nonstop at 38,000 feet.
- 2) AT-72: two 6-blade turboprops.
- 3) Piper Lance: over (or rather BETWEEN) a 10,000 ft mountain range with a sheep-booted pilot no older than Michael Sult.
- 4) 7-seat helicopter (didn't catch the label) onto a glacier.
- 5) Intact Zero (there was also a P-40 at the War Memorial Museum). The Zero survived the war from 1943-1945 because they didn't have spare parts enough to fly it.

Can you guess which one scared me most?

THE SUNBEAM

The Scrap Bin By Denny Goodrich

Do you know someone who does home metal casting? I have two small projects I want to cast in aluminum, but I will soon be stalled at the moving stage. There are foundries in Boone and Marshalltown that I can contact, but I am more curious about a home foundry.

I want to make at least one modified exhaust header for a Super Tigre muffler that will fit a Webra Speed .91. I also have a broken casting for a video tripod pan handle that I want to make.

Please let me know!

Denny
